

Obama's Economic Policy: An Interim Report Card

Edward Ashbee will consider the impact of the $787 billion stimulus package that Congress passed in February 2009 and suggest reasons why and how the administration might have secured a bigger bang for the buck.

Edward Ashbee is an Associate Professor in the Center for Business and Politics at CBS. He writes about US and British politics and, in particular, the making of economic policy. His latest book, The US Economy Today will be published by Manchester University Press in July 2010.
