Ingo Walter

Ingo Walter is the Charles Simon Professor of Applied Financial Economics at the Stern School of Business, New York University, and also serves as Director of the Stern Global Business Institute, an independent academic research center focusing on global economic and management issues.

Dr. Walter's principal areas of academic and consulting activity include international trade policy, international banking, environmental economics, and economics of multinational corporate operations. He has published papers in various professional journals in these fields and is the author, co-author or editor of 26 books, including Street Smarts: Linking Professional Conduct and Shareholder Value in the Securities Industry (Boston: Harvard Business School Press, 1997), The Political Economy of European Financial Integration (Manchester, Manchester University Press and Cambridge: MIT Press, 1997) and High Finance in the Euro-Zone (London: Financial Times - Prentice Hall, 2000). His new book, Mergers and Acquisitions in Banking and Finance – What Works, What Fails and Why? will be published in 2003 by Oxford University Press.

He has served as a consultant to various corporations, banks, government agencies and international institutions, and has held a number of board memberships.
