

Secondary Education and Race Relations in New York and London: Lessons for the Multiethnic European City

This talk will present data from a study of students attending multiethnic secondary schools in New York and London. The project analyzes race relations and the influences on ethnic integration at school. The talk will suggest that particular school structures foster racial and ethnic integration.