Primary research area:

Martin Jes Iversens (MJI) primary research area is strategy and innovation with an empirical focus on contemporary Danish shipping.

MJIs current research concerns strategies and innovation in Danish shipping companies after year 2000, with focus on the case of the Danish shipping company Norden.

His research on strategy can be described as "post-chandlerian" inspired by the American economic sociologist Neil Fligsteins theory on organisational key-actors, impetus for change and the following concept of strategic regimes (Fligstein, 1990). MJI has published three books based on the regime-theoretic framework in East Asiatic Company/ØK (Iversen, 2016), GN Store Nord (Iversen, 2015) and Finansiell Stabilitet (Iversen, 2013) and the research behind the books has been used in peer reviewed articles concerning the Financial Crises in Scandinavia (Iversen & Sjøgren, 2019); Shipping in Scandinavia (Tenold & Iversen, 2014; Sornn-Friese, Taudal Poulsen & Iversen, 2012).

MJIs research on innovation is focused on the contemporary development of Danish shipping. With inspiration from the late Schumpeters concept of "creative response to economic change" (1947) I try to understand particular business models and digitalization in shipping after 1990.

All his research is embedded in a wider interest in the role of private enterprises in the development of the modern capitalistic societies including the relation between the companies and the state in the processes of economic globalization.

Current research project:

I am currently involved in two research projects:

1. An entrepreneurial study of the relation between digital technologies and new business models in international shipping after year 2010 with focus on the product tanker and the dry bulk segments.
2. The strategic and organisational development of the leading global dry bulk and product tanker shipping company D/S NORDEN with a particular focus on the transformation of the company after year 2000.
