Teaching/Course Development:

I teach and develop the following main courses in the graduate law and economics education (merc.jur), CBS:

Graduate course: "Tort law and insurance". An integrated law and economics course on tort and insurance law. The course is increasingly case-based.

Graduate course: "Advanced contract law-and- economics".

At South-Eastern University in Norway, I teach courses in law and economics

At the University in Jerusalem and Tel-Aviv I taught courses on contract law and economics (2017 and 2018)

At Sankt Gallen University I taught a course in Tort and Insurance law and economics. (2017).

At Magdeburg University I taught a course for PhD students in Frontiers in Microeconomics: Behavioral and non-behavioral perspectives on modern contract theory. (2015)

At Pennsylvania Law School, I taught a course for law graduates on Contracting in a Globalized World, drawing on a case-study I developed together with Yale Law School concerning the construction contracts for the Øresund bridge connecting Denmark and Sweden (2012).
