

IHS Markit™

Leading the voyage towards a sustainable maritime supply chain

Richard Clayton, Chief correspondent, IHS Markit

Copenhagen, Monday 29 August 2016

A microscopic view of numerous oil droplets of various sizes, appearing as bright yellow and orange spheres with dark outlines, set against a lighter, hazy background. The droplets are densely packed in some areas and more sparse in others, creating a complex, textured pattern.

Sustainable development

“Development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.”

Leading the voyage

- We must lead the voyage, not manage it

Leading the voyage

- We must lead the voyage, not manage it
- Our customers don't think about quay-to-quay; we shouldn't either

Sustainable development

“If you already think you are as good as you can be, you will defend the status quo and become defensive when people point out your weaknesses. If you think you can improve, you will be oriented towards a search for marginal gains, and you will be thrilled when people point out your weaknesses because it gives you a chance to fix them and become even better...”

Leading the voyage

- We must lead the voyage, not manage it
- Our customers don't think about quay-to-quay; we shouldn't either
- We should seek those marginal gains
- We must educate and inspire, not regulate and dishearten

Leading the voyage

- We must lead the voyage, not manage it
- Our customers don't think about quay-to-quay; we shouldn't either
- We should seek those marginal gains
- We must educate and inspire, not regulate and dishearten
- We need to recognise cultural sensitivities

Leading the voyage

- We must lead the voyage, not manage it
- Our customers don't think about quay-to-quay; we shouldn't either
- We should seek those marginal gains
- We must educate and inspire, not regulate and dishearten
- We need to recognise cultural sensitivities
- The sustainable maritime supply chain is grounded in common solutions

Thank you